Customer Reviews

This is the final book Jack Frost published before he passed away this year, and as a final work, it is by far his best. It is a fantastic examination of the heart: why do I do the things I do? As a pastor, this book is a hard read: it may be painful or offensive to find out you have been striving for years, trying desperately (even subconsciously) to please your Master, when we could have been working with our Father. I have personally handed out 14 copies to pastor friends of mine in the last year, and every minister I have given it to has been profoundly changed. Becoming a Son, instead of a Slave, changes your entire life. One friend of mine began to read the book, and became very upset with me. He said: "I've done everything up till now because God is my boss, and he owns me, and if He wants to burn me out, that's His decision! I'm a slave for Christ! Don't tell me, after all I've suffered, that I've done it for the wrong reasons..." He said this with tears of frustration pain rolling down his cheeks, and I saw the spirit of Sonship begin to unravel the spirit of Slavery from around his heart. Another Pastor I gave this to was frustrated and confused as to why he felt he could never engender loyalty in people, or create spiritual sons. He talked the talk, but it never worked. He realized that you can speak like a Father, but act like an Orphan. Once you become a Son (or Daughter), you will create and attract Sons and Daughters. The desire in the Church to "Father" (or "shepherd", etc) is doomed to failure if led by Orphans. A wonderful woman I gave this book to was struggling: She was loyal and hard working, honest and sincere Christian, trying her best to serve her Pastor.
